DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY IN MEDIA & DESIGN INNOVATION

A one-of-a-kind doctoral program for scholars and practitioners in media, design and creative disciplines.

The Ph.D. in Media & Design Innovation is made for those who are interested in exploring research questions through practice — raising relevant questions and producing demonstrable solutions through creative projects and contextual writing.

Graduates of the Media & Design Innovation program are trained to be intellectually agile creative professionals with a strong capacity for in-depth innovation and problem solving.

HANDS-ON LEARNING

The program offers tremendous flexibility for students to explore all areas of the creative industries — from practicing and planning to prototype — while tapping into a broad base of expertise. Successful applicants will create and disseminate in their chosen creative medium, as well as produce a written analysis of their research project. Students can collaborate with industry professionals and explore emerging technologies in their fields and complete an optional internship in a field related to the proposed research project.

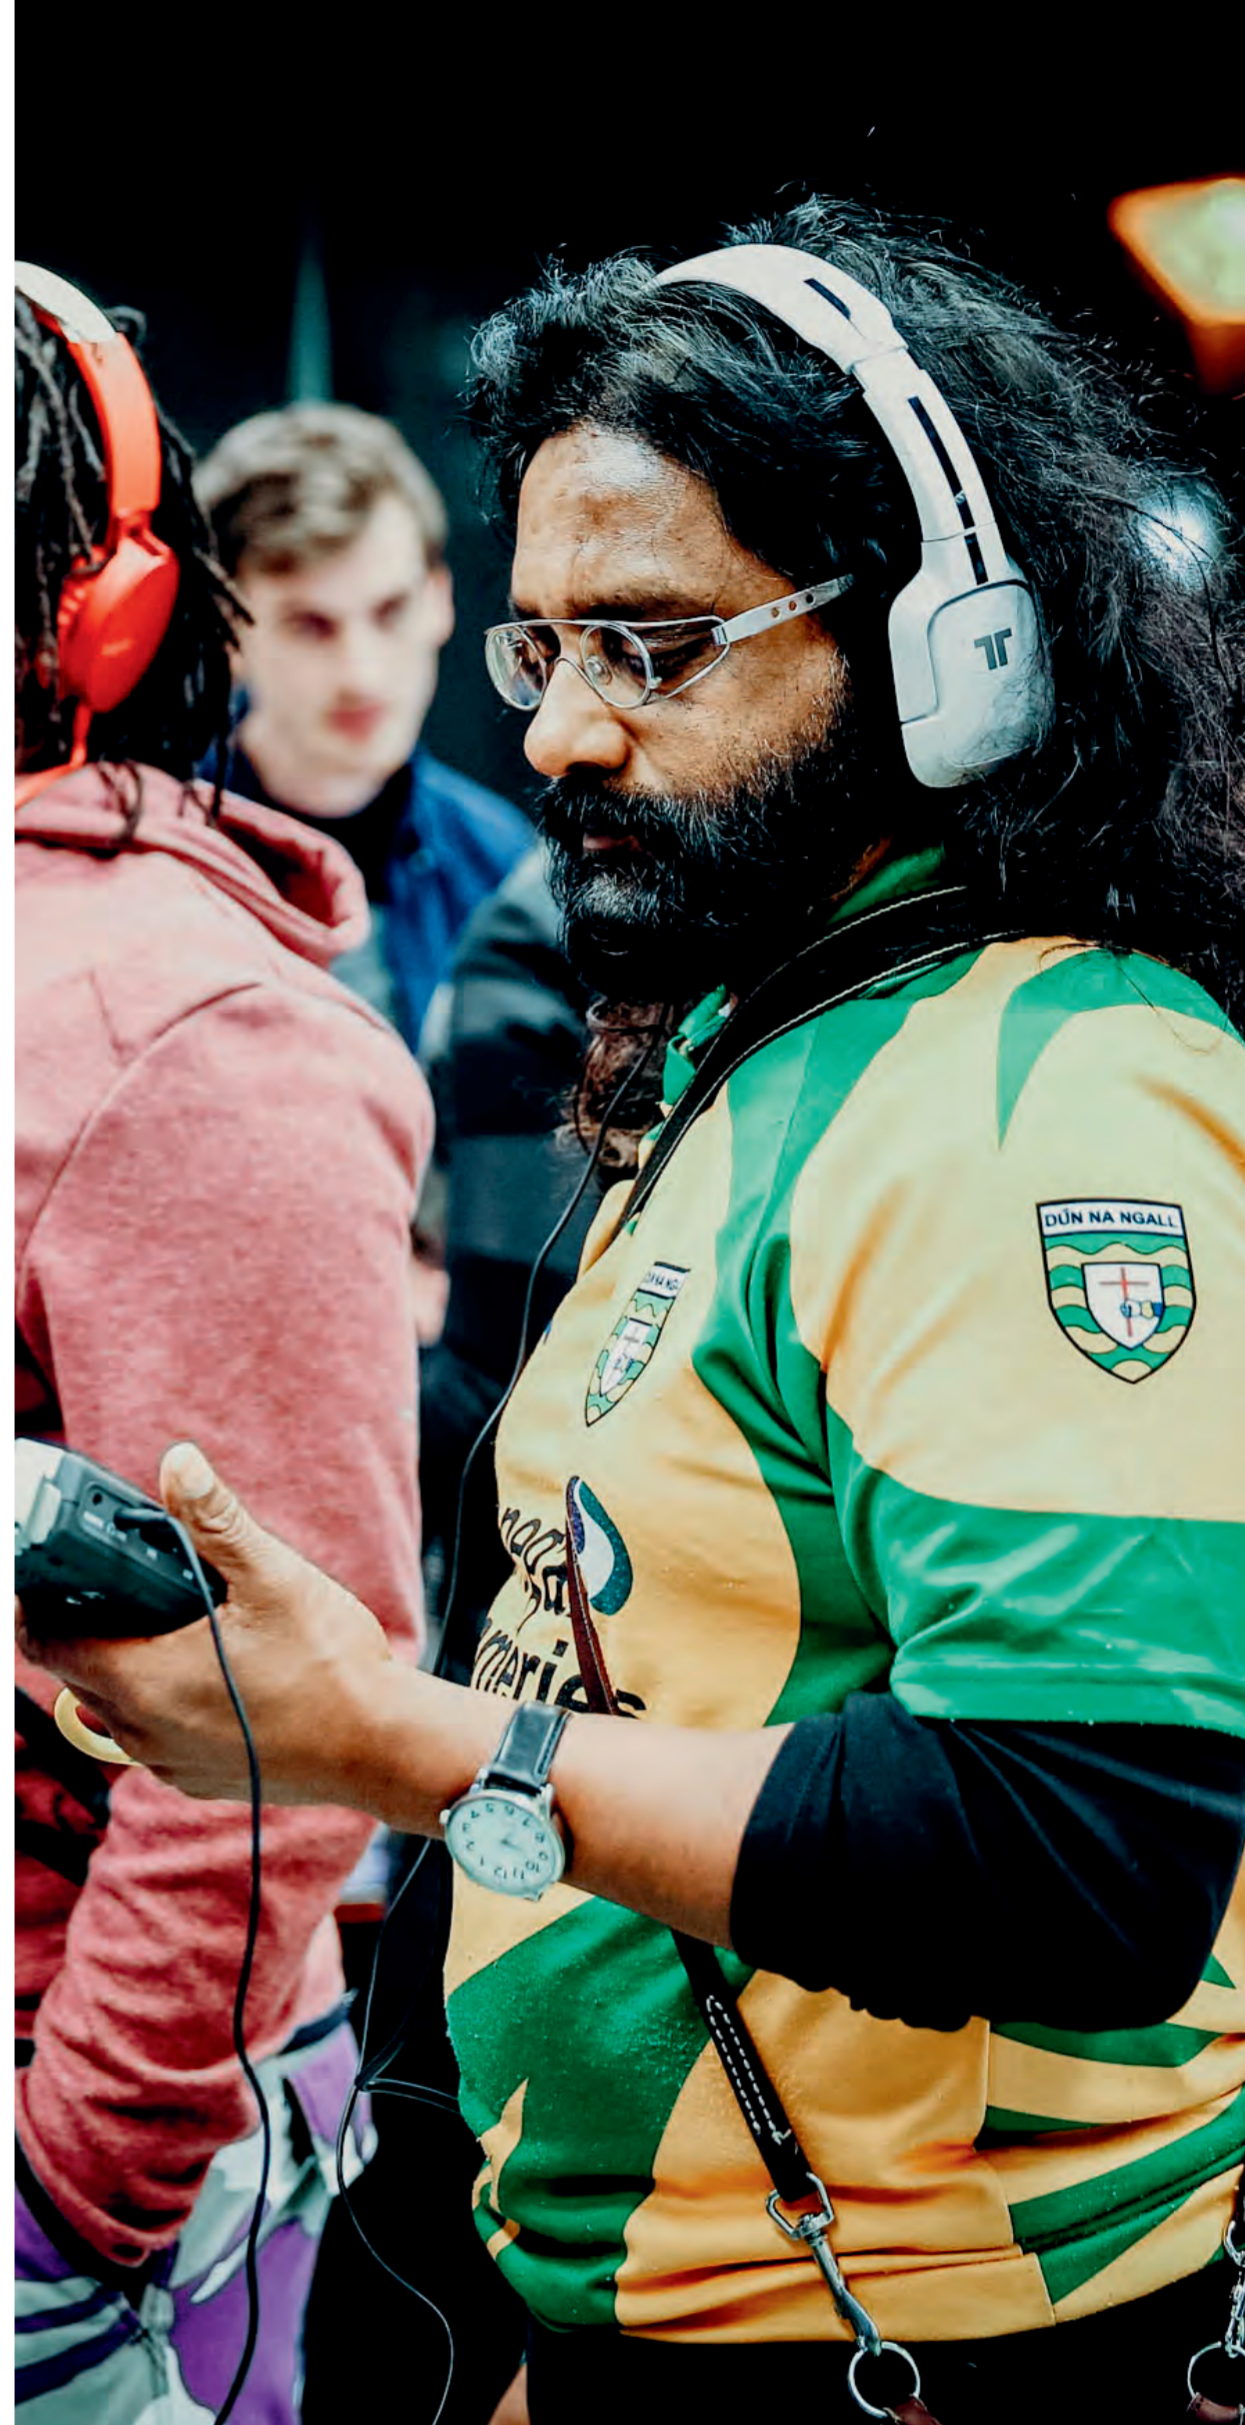

We aim to develop Media & Design Innovation scholars and to engage researchers ready to apply and evolve unique design methods to address complex problems.

RESEARCH AND SUPPORT

Drawing on innovative and collaborative approaches, the Ph.D. in Media & Design Innovation is enhanced through unparalleled access to The Creative School's creative ecosystem in the heart of downtown Toronto. This includes access to an interdisciplinary research hub, advanced design fabrication and technology labs, media studios, incubator-style zones, and an international network of partners that span 27 programs in media, design and creative disciplines.
