“ Showing my willingness to learn is what helped me get an excellent rating at the CRA. No one expects you to be perfect, but they do expect you to learn from your mistakes while staying positive. This made it easier for me to excel in my role.

My biggest contribution at the CRA was making recommendations on how to increase efficiency within my role. This included using Pivot tables when cleansing data from taxpayers, and creating standardized templates for documentation. My Managers at CRA had different job responsibilities, so I realized I was the one who had the most insight to provide into my role and how to make the work more efficient.
