

LIFE INSTITUTE JACK BROWN AWARD for Continuing Education Students 2011 Application Information and Guidelines

What is the LIFE Institute Jack Brown Award?

The LIFE Institute Award was created in 1996 in order to recognize and reward continuing education students at Ryerson University's The G. Raymond Chang School of Continuing Education committed to studies and activities designed to improve the life of seniors in the community at large. The name of the Award was changed to 'The LIFE Institute Jack Brown Award' in 1999 to honour Jack Brown, Past President of LIFE Institute and advocate of lifelong learning for seniors.

What is the value of the LIFE Institute Jack Brown Award?

Each recipient will receive a cash award of $1,000.00 to be deposited directly to the student's tuition fee account.

What is the criteria and selection process?

- currently enrolled in a Certificate program or in the Gateway for International Professional program at Ryerson University's The G. Raymond Chang School of Continuing Education
- is a Canadian citizen and permanent resident of Ontario
- is in financial need
- can demonstrate an interest in and or involvement in studies or activities which enhance the quality of life for seniors.

The selection committee will choose the Award winner based on the above criteria.

A formal presentation of this Award will be made at a special ceremony in October 2012. Recipients of this award will be expected to attend.
